

Pi Day
March 14

Dear Parents,

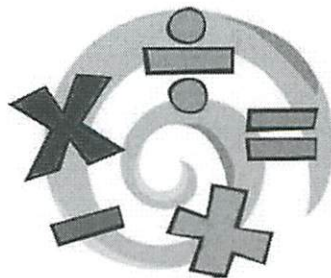

Pi day is March 14, 2018, and this year Port Barre Elementary will make it a day similar to the 100th day of school in hopes of continuing to get our students excited about Math. As a joint family project, you could possibly create a Math shirt for students to wear to school on Wednesday, March 14th (no tank tops or sleeveless shirts). Their shirts may not necessarily have anything to do with Pi (3.14...), but should have everything to do with Math and possibly circles! Also, Pi Day falls on Albert Einstein's birthday, so students may choose to dress like him!

While lower elementary students are not ready for the irrational number Pi, this will be a great way to continue getting students excited about Math. On this day around campus, students may be doing activities that deal with circles in their classrooms.

We look forward to seeing lots of fun Math shirts and Little Einstein's on March 14, 2018!

Have fun and be creative!

Port Barre Elementary Faculty and Staff

Approved: 