

Shetal Shah received her Master's degree from Columbia University in Educational Technology and Media and her Bachelor's of Science degree from Tufts University in Biology and Philosophy. She has worked within a diverse range of educational environments that include NYIT, Fordham University, The Boston Museum of Science, K-12 schools in New York City and Dayalbagh Educational Institute in Agra, India. She speaks fluent Spanish and conversational Hindi and Gujrati. She is also a recognized filmmaker, having worked with the United Nations, The New School and Pace University.