Internet Acceptance Use Policy and Guidelines

What Is the Internet?

The Internet technology began in the 1960's with the Department of Defense who used it to compete in the space race. Today, the Internet is available to any computer user in the world. The Internet is a communications highway connecting databases and computers whose users are able to access and share information. Students and teachers at St. Louis have access to many curriculum related resources. Listed below are examples of the types of information that may be accessed:

1. Electronic mail communication with people all over the world.
2. Information from libraries, scientists, authors, politicians, and museums etc.
3. Discussion groups on a wide range of topics such as culture and the environment.
4. Videos and music from libraries, museums etc.
5. Research to gather information from the World Wide Web and Navigational software.

Security and Privileges

With access to computers and people all over the world, also comes the availability of information and material on the Internet that would not be considered of educational value in the context of a school setting. St. Louis School will take precautions to restrict access to the Internet with proper supervision and implementation of this user's policy. Use of the Internet is a privilege, not a right, and the teacher may review or examine all student files and communications to maintain integrity to the school and student. The school retains the right to edit any material in a student's computer file that is not related to the educational purposes of the school.
