

HOURS UPON HOURS

Putting their heads together

Megan Reitz, class of 2018

March 27, 2018

Student council spends countless hours inside and outside of school, planning and preparing almost all of the school's events.

Senior Harry Weidner would know best as student council president. "When planning an event and just before an event, it can be approximately six plus hours a week of setup and meetings for me," Weidner said.

Vice President Susie Williams also knows just how much work goes into these events to make them run smoothly. "Whenever big events are approaching, such as THON and Homecoming, student council members will spend entire afternoons after school to make decorations, prepare activities, and clean up once an event is finished," Williams said.

From Homecoming to mini-THON, Student Council is faced with many challenges. Senior Adam Mrozowski finds Mini-THON to be the most work for the Council to plan and run. "Planning 12 hours of jam-packed fun is not as easy as it sounds, despite all the creative minds we have on our council," Mrozowski said.

With Homecoming being the first major event of every new school year, "It requires a lot of cooperation to merge creative new ideas and tradition into the perfect homecoming game, spirit week, bonfire, and dance," Williams said.

When planning big events like these, it's expected for

Taking a break from running events senior Grayson Moyer stops for a picture with his girlfriend, junior Abby Tyger.

Source: Gillian Ambroe

there to be some head-butting between members when making decisions. "Great minds don't always think alike. One of the biggest conflicts in making decisions is accepting that although several groups can have good ideas, not all will be able to mesh together," Williams said.

Student council is the backbone of so many school events. From Homecoming to blood drives to post-prom, they keep everything running smoothly. ■

Westmont Hilltop School District

Unified in a commitment to inspire and to empower resilient, lifelong learners.

This feature story was created by students in yearbook journalism with faculty oversight and is intended for WHSD students, faculty and community members. All efforts will be made to ensure the accuracy of this publication. Please report any mistakes to yearbook advisor Korbin Shearer at kxs@whsd.org