1. re visit the learning experience or reaffirm the concepts we were to grasp today Mon, Oct 8, 2012 12:39 PM
2. McRel seems to take into consideration needs for teacher's professional growth Mon, Oct 8, 2012 12:39 PM
3. better presentation would be better before making a decision Mon, Oct 8, 2012 12:36 PM
4. McRel has a better language. McRel has more areas for comments. Mon, Oct 8, 2012 12:30 PM
5. McREL Mon, Oct 8, 2012 12:28 PM
6. McREL seems to be the choice that actually helps teachers Mon, Oct 8, 2012 12:23 PM
7. The second model seemed to show a better understanding of teaching in general- stressed best practice and collaborationn Mon, Oct 8, 2012 12:22 PM
8. I am concerned by the numerical teacher "score" and student input presented in the Stronge model. I prefer the teacher guidance presented in the McREL model. Overall, I prefer the McREL model. Mon, Oct 8, 2012 12:20 PM
9. It is difficult to respond to this without more understanding of all the component's specific. Mon, Oct 8, 2012 12:19 PM
10. I believe The McREL Model is a more natural, more organic approach for teachers in our district. It appears very realistic and practical in its organization. As a newer teacher, I believe my professional growth would be supported by The McREL Model, with many opportunities for administrative guidance and feedback. Mon, Oct 8, 2012 12:17 PM

- 11. I like the way McRel does not give a number ranking for individual teachers. I also like how McRel encourages the growth of the teacher. Mon, Oct 8, 2012 12:16 PM
- 12. Do not want to be given a ranked number Mon, Oct 8, 2012 12:15 PM
- 13. McRel does have a more constructive approach. Stronge is overloaded with forms and would be time consuming. Mon, Oct 8, 2012 12:13 PM
- 14. The McREL Model seems to be a great tool to use for teachers to see where they can improve and exactly how they can improve. Mon, Oct 8, 2012 12:11 PM
- 15. The Stronge model put too much of a burden on the teacher to provide documentation. Our time should be spent on instructionally related tasks. We already have too much to do. Mon, Oct 8, 2012 12:11 PM
- 16. I prefer the McRel model as it is based on a growth model. Mon, Oct 8, 2012 12:10 PM
- 17. The McRel evaluation model supports differentiated teaching to accomodate differentiated learners/students Mon, Oct 8, 2012 12:10 PM
- 18. I feel that the McRel evaluation system was developed to support the teacher (just by language used) rather than giving the teacher a cumulative number score. Mon, Oct 8, 2012 12:09 PM
- 19. I like McRel's constructivist approach. I like that it is a non-profit company. It feels more supportive than critical of staff. Mon, Oct 8, 2012 12:09 PM
- 20. I think there should have been a conversation after the presentations as to what modifications the district would make for each model. Mon, Oct 8, 2012 12:02 PM

- 21. The McRel model seemed like a tool that would treat all teachers fairly. It seemed like a tool that could make objective judgements. Mon, Oct 8, 2012 11:59 AM
- 22. I like that the McRel model offers guided growth rather than just check boxes. It appears to offer an opportunity for the teacher to work with evaluators to better themselves. Mon, Oct 8, 2012 9:46 AM
- 23. It looked more user friendly and easier to understand. Mon, Oct 8, 2012 8:37 AM
- 24. It seemed the McRel model was a better fit for our district. Mon, Oct 8, 2012 8:36 AM
