When the Louisiana Purchase was ratified in 1803, the size of the United States doubled. The nation went from 17 states and a handful of territories east of the Mississippi River to a nation that also controlled a vast and unknown portion of the continent west of the Mississippi River. Eventually, all or parts of 15 states were carved from the Louisiana Purchase.