

Dr. Jodi Imbimbo, the Executive Director of ReLearning Curve, serves as the principal investigator of the grant's evaluation. She has over 25 years of experience in evaluating education programs in New York City and over 10 years evaluating instructional technology programs. Her work has included complex, multi-year program evaluations, qualitative case studies, and policy studies. Dr. Imbimbo has considerable experience with the New York City Public Schools and their community partners and stakeholders. As a former manager in what previously was called the Board of Education's Office of Research, Evaluation, and Assessment, she knows the New York City Public schools' operations, data systems, and myriad educational programs. In addition to managing and overseeing the evaluation, Dr. Imbimbo is directly involved in key evaluation activities, including designing the evaluation plan and instruments, observing program activities, analyzing data and writing reports.