TAG (TEEN AGE GRIEF) is a support group for 13 to 18 year olds experiencing the recent death of a family member or friend.

TAG focuses on helping educate and facilitate mutual support during the grieving process.

Members are given the opportunity to share their feelings, learn more about the grief process, bond with others and develop new methods of coping and problem solving.

Comments from past TAG participants:

Coming here at first is scary and overwhelming but it becomes fun and comforting. You do activities that will help you let out your feelings and thoughts with no judgment WHATSOEVER. You make bonds with other teens around you. I want to come back for another session.
Have fun and don't be afraid.

I was forced to come here. I was so angry my mom was making me come. My dad passed away just two months ago when I started this group. It's been five months now. This group has helped me more than I thought it ever would. Be very open-minded about the situation. These wonderful people are only here to help you! With love, C

Just wait, it gets better. It's weird at first, but the more you go you get closer to everyone in the group and it gets easier to talk. 😊

Be patient! There's a pizza party at the end! Just kidding. It's not as bad as you think. Give it some time!
