HOW TO DO THAT... BLENDED LEARNING MODEL: THE FLIPPED CLASSROOM

Did you know that there are many ways that you can personalize instruction for your students? It could be 1 on 1 tutoring, culturally responsive teaching, Competency Based Instruction, Project Based Learning, or Blended Learning to name a few.

This year we have worked to introduce Blended Learning: Station Rotation Model at our Targeted Leadership, Coaches, and Principals meetings, and many have taken on applying the model within their staff meetings and classrooms.

Station Rotation is just one of many Blended Learning Models. If you have been curious about other Blended Models, you should check out the Flipped Classroom model. This is a great model to use if you want to use your class time to facilitate labs, provide more in depth support, or opportunities for classroom discussions, such as Socratic Seminar. I am often asked, when using the Flipped model, what is to be done regarding students who do not have access to the internet/devices at home or who do not have an opportunity to complete the work? There are several ways that you can support those students, while at the same time taking advantage of the Flipped model. Flipped resources can be downloaded to devices, saved on flash drives to take home, or classroom structures can include opportunities for review of the material prior to the day's implementation of the new learning. If you would like to explore the implementation of Station Rotation or Flipped Learning, or any other Blended Learning model, please feel free to contact me at tmalone@nhusd.k12.ca.us.
