

Thank You, Parents!

by Tom Antioho, Principal
Reed City High School

An open letter to the parents of Reed City High School Students

The staff and administration of Reed City High School are very appreciative of your involvement with our students, the curriculum, and extra-curricular programs and activities during the past years.

The attitude of a parent does indeed influence the attitude, behavior, and even the academic performance level of his or her child or children. You, the most important role model, often make the difference between ultimate success and failure. Because of this rather simple truth, we highly value supportive parents who are very involved in their children's lives and education.

Thank you for the time and the effort you have spent bridging the academic and social gaps among home, school and society at large. Your interest and involvement in the Reed City High School have impacted our curriculum and made it more effective and relevant. Our staff and students alike have benefited from your cooperative association with the school system. Your efforts, direct or indirect, have helped create a student friendly school in which the whole student is educated and guided.

Without your interest and continued support, our jobs would be much more difficult. Without your help, the quality of education would perhaps be diminished, thus each of us would have lost a bit of the best.

We look forward to the continuation of a good rapport between you and our school.

Thank you for being there!
